- Free version - up to 100 megabytes (MB) of online storage
- The functionality of the paid version is exactly the same
- In the free version you have access to a 10 MB of online storage (a single message can not exceed that amount)
- Email a large file as a file attachment to one or more contacts
- Preview the file and select the recipients
- If you are not using the add-in you can always log into your FilesAnywhere account and delete unwanted files
- If you change your mind and want to download a file, you can do so by downloading the link
- File attachments are of different types, and you can choose the most suitable one for your needs (for example, photos can be in different formats: jpg, png, gif)
- Send a link to your contacts, so that they can download the file right away (they do not need to install the add-in, which will be downloaded automatically for them)
- You can also send a link to your contacts right from the add-in itself, by selecting the file on your PC, clicking on the button, and then choosing one of the options - an email or a file
- In the free version of the application you can share a link for just one recipient
- Select the file and click on the button for sending a link (Note: the recipient of the file must also have the add-in installed)
- The process of sending a link can take a few seconds - this is because a connection is made with the FilesAnywhere service, and not with your mail provider
- The link you send contains a special code, which allows you to track the file usage
- FilesAnywhere also provides an option for you to set up a rule (link or file) for automatically sending a file to your contacts. This rule can be configured once and then activated when you want to send a file (or the link to a file)
- If you select the "send link" option (not the "send file" option), then FilesAnywhere adds a button to the message composition window
- You can also easily remove the button by clicking on it
- The number of files you can send at a time is limited to 10 (files have to be less than 10 MB in size)
